

what legal language do I need for social media?

podcast episode 1 tip sheet

If you have a social media page or host a Facebook group, you might be wondering... What legal language do I need for social media?

You might be holding back and afraid to post tips or tools that could be misconstrued or seen as "advice" because you don't want to get in trouble.

Or you might be concerned about being held responsible for what your participants write in the group. You just want to create a positive FB group experience where everyone can support each other - not worry about social media posts.

What if there was a super-easy way to protect yourself on social media?

THERE IS! You want to use what I call a Mini-Disclaimer.

What's a Mini-Disclaimer?

A Mini-Disclaimer is well, a small "mini" disclaimer. It's a VERY short, abbreviated disclaimer – just 1-2 sentences that you can use on your social media page as legal language that clearly tells people what you do and don't do so they don't get confused and come after you.

The 2 BIG WAYS that a Disclaimer protects you:

1. A Disclaimer creates CLARITY.
2. A Disclaimer also does what its name says – it DISCLAIMS LIABILITY.

The #1 REASON that you need a Mini-Disclaimer on your social media page is to feel safe to share your thoughts and not hold back. Disclaimers are your base level legal protection which I associate with the root chakra to help you feel safe and grounded.

You still want to be responsible and mindful of what you're posting in the group and not knowingly post something that could harm people, of course. But, isn't it great to know that a Mini-Disclaimer can give you basic legal protection for your social media page?
